Harvard U. rests case

Hearings on Harvard University's legal battle to throw out a vote creating a white collar union wrapped up yesterday with officials of the Ivy-League school claiming organizers trampled on voter rights in their zeal to get out the vote.

But union leaders contend they ran a clean campaign for the May 17 vote, in which about 3,000 white-collar workers voted to form the Harvard Union of Clerical and Technical Workers by 44 votes.

'I believe that in the time that we've been here before the judge we've been able to show that we did nothing illegal,' said Kristine Rondeau, chief union organizer.

'Harvard University conducted a full-fledged, full-force anti-union campaign,' she said during a recess in the National Labor Relations Board hearing. 'I believe that they're going to go into the union busters' hall of fame.'

The hearings before administrative law judge Joel A. Hartz began Aug. 15. Attorneys for both sides must submit briefs by Sept. 16 to Hartz, who will make a decision. Both sides may file exceptions to the decision, which would then be taken up by the NLRB in Washington.

Harvard is asking for a new election, saying that union officials harassed employees at home and work, checked off names of employees on a master list of supporters, bought an airline ticket to allow a vacationing employee to return to Cambridge and interrogated workers on their intentions.

'The desire of a party to get out the vote has never been a justification for list-keeping,' said Harvard attorney Nelson Ross.

The key issue is whether keeping the master list interfered with employees' right not to vote, Hartz told attorneys as final arguments were made. He asked that briefs contain specific cases pertaining to whether keeping a checklist of voters would violate rights not to vote.

The union drive, which began in 1975, and the University challenge to the vote has drawn attention from national labor leaders as a possible test-case on organizing white-collar workers.

University President Derek Bok said previously in a statement that the school was proud of its academic trade union program.

National housing policy that lasts

By David C. Schwartz

(NF) Housing trends and national housing policy have been bad news for Americans throughout the 1980s. The negative trends are well documented. Homeownership levels have declined every year, in every region of the country, from 1980-1986. Young families and first-time homebuyers have con-

New residence halls on target for 1989 fall semester

By Craig Ryder

Students returning to the University after a well-earned summer vacation are sure to notice two major changes in the University's facilities.

The construction of two new dorms, begun at the start of the Spring semester, is now well under way. Imposing steel superstructures now rise behind Concordia Hall at South Campus and along the banks of the Merrimack behind Leitch and Bourgeois at North.

The new buildings, constructed at an estimated cost of $17 million, are part of a major expansion planned for ULowell over the next decade, which includes major renovations of several buildings as well as the construction of new parking garages.

Despite a holdup in funding for the projects from the state earlier this year, both facilities are on schedule and will be completed in time for the Fall 1989 semester, according to Larry Siegel, Director of Residence Life for the University.

The added capacity of the new dorms will bring the total population of students living on campus to 2600. The addition to Concordia Hall will house 275, while the new dorm at North Campus will be home to 350 students. The new housing will be 'apartment style', with 4-8 students of the same sex living in each unit, each of which will have its own bathroom.

Writing on the Walls...

"I am 16 ...will meet with anyone MY AGE at the Lowell Library. Set time and date."

Summer's nearly over now. School is again underway. Books. Classes. Dates. A new semester to meet new people.

"Young, hot, and hung. Willing to please. Meet here..."

A new crop of students now piles into our overcrowded classrooms and parking lots. Each one anxious and expectant about what lies before them just around the corner.

"It is a place I would never go into," stated one university student, "no matter how desperate I got."

Although there are fewer professors here this year, each one is as equally hopeful that the new school year will be a good one with no dark holes to mar the way.

I went into there once, three or four years ago, and noticed the bleak walls covered with male, sexual excretions and a joy hole was just opposite the toilet paper.

I had to hurry to another class, but sometimes the call of nature is stronger than the lure of higher learning.

Many things have changed around the University during the summer break. Bigger and better buildings are going up, another class of friends have gone away, and tuition and academic fees are on the rise.

Rising up over my seat, etched into the wall, was a large male organ making like a free-flowing garden hose. Across from it, underneath more colorful verbs and adjectives, was another crude drawing of a woman waiting for penetration.

Finishing my business, I got up off my porcelain seat and hurried off when I noticed a pair of searching eyes gazing up from under the dividing wall trying to snatch a glimpse of my freshman body.

I was fairly sure I knew what he wanted, but I wondered why he was looking for it in the basement of Coburn Hall. Then, remembering the come-ons, the drawings, the stains, and the joy hole I wondered if maybe I wasn't in a place where I wasn't supposed to be.

Everything seems to change so fast around the University. Everything except the bathrooms in Coburn. I visited the Coburn bathroom again for the first time in four years. I figured I was safe since the students hadn't arrived yet. Last year's stains had been removed, and some of the drawings had been washed away, but the writing on the walls, the come-ons and the joy hole remained the same.

The administration has bold plans to make ULowell the best. I'd be happy if they just made some things a little better while I'm still in college.

People of America want a new, fair housing policy

fronted unprecedented prices, downpayment requirements and mortgage rates while income levels stagnated and family savings rates fell. An explosive increase in homelessness erupted all across the nation. Rents so far outstripped income and inflation that a majority of America's 30 million tenants now live in apartments which our government classifies as "having a housing problem." Overall, about 25% of the American people still live in overcrowded, dilapidated or cost-burdened dwelling units. National housing policy, in this decade, has been largely responsible for and/or unresponsive to the negative trends. Deep cuts in federal housing expenditures, diminished tax incentives for housing production, and the decision not to enact new programs to aid homebuyers have exacerbated the nation's housing woes. In recent months, newspaper editorials across the nation have identified this growing housing crisis and called for new solutions.

What can be done? Policy makers, industry groups and housing advocates have produced in recent months, a welter of reports, studies, position papers and analyses, with widely varying proposals. While these analyses are impressive, achieving agreement on the many different approaches and recommendations may prove difficult.

Behind all considerations of a new national housing policy is a huge, significant, and until now, unanswered question: "What do the American people really want the federal government to do about housing?" To answer that question, the National Housing Institute, a nonprofit and nonpartisan research organization, sponsored a country wide opinion survey on housing issues. The study, conducted by RL Associates of Princeton, New Jersey, a public opinion research firm, was based on interviews with 1,000 Americans during March and April. The sample is statistically projectable to the distribution of opinion in the population of U.S. adults.

Key Findings

Five major conclusions emerged from the survey.

1. The American public views the difficulties of homeownership, affordable rental apartments, and homelessness as important problems for the nation.

2. Americans support a comprehensive series of programs that are designed to meet the perceived housing needs of working and middle class Americans. Sixty (60) to ninety percent (90) of the public supported programs including: a downpayment loan for young families; a mortgage interest rate reduction fund; emergency loans and grants to prevent homelessness; a program to finance needed dwelling unit modifications for the frail elderly; and public financing to rehabilitate old and vacant buildings for low-income housing.

3. Americans are willing to pay for housing programs through increased taxes. A clear majority of the American people say they are prepared to tax themselves to payproof for specific new federal programs they support. The survey indicates substantial support for a additional $12-17 billion in taxes for new federal housing initiatives. By a ratio of

2:1, Americans said they would be willing to pay an additional $120 a year in taxes to support a package of programs assisting the homeless, the poor, and middle-class Americans.

4. A substantial majority of the American people would be more likely to vote for political leaders advocating new housing programs. Fifty percent (50) of the public would be more likely to vote for a pro-housing Presidential candidate, only six percent (6) would be less likely to do so.

5. A near majority of Americans now experience, or fear that they or someone in their family will soon be confronted with significant housing problems.

A new housing policy? The people say 'yes'! □

CAMPUS SHORTS

Swaggart's sex scandal hurts his Bible College

(CPS) Last spring's sex scandal apparently has caused a 72 percent enrollment drop at Jimmy Swaggart's bible college in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, this fall.

School officials say about 400 students have signed up for classes at the school, compared to 1,451 students in fall, 1987, attorney William Treeby said.

Treeby conceded some students and faculty members left the school after the Assemblies of God Church defrocked Swaggart, who had confessed to committing unspecified "sins." Debra Murphree, a prostitute, said she had posed naked for the evangelist in a Louisiana motel room several times.

'Reverse Discrimination' cries Dartmouth Review

(CPS) The embattled Dartmouth Review -- the first and among the most strident of the conservative student papers founded on U.S. campuses in recent years -- has sued Dartmouth College for "reverse discrimination."

The suit aimed to retaliate against the school's suspension of three Review staffers for "bullying" a black professor last March.

The Review had written several articles criticizing music Prof. William Cole -- whom it called a "brillo head" -- and then, in February, sent three staffers into Cole's class. They refused to leave at Cole's request.

"The sanctity of the classroom is what this is all about," contended Dartmouth spokesman Alex Huppe. "They went in to disrupt his classroom." □

In March, a campus disciplinary board agreed, suspending the three students. One of them went on to work as an aide to Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle.

Klansman's name removed from building

(CPS) The University of Oklahoma's regents have decided to change the name of a campus building dedicated to a former leader of Ku Klux Klan.

The regents voted 6-1 in July to remove the name of Edwin DeBarr, one of OU's first faculty members and a Klan grand dragon, from OU's chemistry building.

Debra Rives, a leader of the effort to change the name, stated, "The message that we hope it gives is that OU is trying very hard to erase the symbols of racism that have existed on this campus for a number of years." □

Peter Cetera Tells 'One More Story'

By Paul Markunas

Peter Cetera has released a new album on Full Moon Records entitled One More Story. The blond singer/bassist who earned himself quite a following as a member of the band Chicago seems to have established himself as a successful solo artist with this release. For the first time in his solo career, Cetera has made an album which approaches (and possibly surpasses) the quality of Chicago's music. There were two previous solo albums: Peter Cetera in 1981 and Solitude, Solitaire in 1986. Cetera's voice sounds far less electronically enhanced than it did on his later Chicago efforts. For the most part, it is the quality, not the enrichment of the vocals that impresses the listener.

The album begins with the peppy tune 'Best of Times'. Cetera sings of how good life can be if you make an effort towards optimism. There is a good balance of synthesizer and guitar, and it opens the album on a good note.

Next is the first release from the album; it is a song called 'One Good Woman' and it features plenty of the voice overdubs that grace many of Peter Cetera's songs. The sound of Cetera harmonizing with himself has become a trademark of the quality of his music. The third cut, 'Peace of Mind', features the background vocals of Siedah Garrett, Niki Haris, and Peter's brother Kenny Cetera. Again, everything is well balanced and there is a great deal of optimism in the lyrics.

'Heaven Help This Lonely Man' is next, and it is the first slow song on the album. There is no optimism to be found here. It is a truly touching look at the thoughts of a man whose true love has just left him.

This is the kind of song for which Cetera is best known: a relaxed tempo (which allows the vocals to shine) and a heavy dose of emotion. Arguably, this is a song worthy of being in the company of Chicago classics such as 'You're the Inspiration' and 'Hard to Say I'm Sorry.'

The next song has a sound reminiscent of the music Cetera was writing around the turn of the decade. 'Save Me' is a fun song laden with the slide guitar of Bonnie Raitt and James Harrah.

'Holding Out' is an easy going, rainy day type of song. Cetera sings of persistence and (here's that word again) optimism.

Next up is a song called 'Body Language (There In the Dark)'. It is the first of two songs on which Pink Floyd guitarist David Gilmour appears. It is a funky tune about lust and one night stands. Although Gilmour has a solo, it is not until 'You Never Listen to Me' that we hear his 'Floydian' influence. Gilmour's guitar work is a strong complement to Cetera's singing.

Next is a tune called 'Sheherezade'. A lot of chanting and background vocals (featuring Lulu Smith as Sheherezade) grace the tune and give it an Arabian sound.

The last song, the title track, is a nice calm song. Cetera's voice is simply superb as he sings to his daughter and promises to be there in the morning.

One More Story is a fine album all around. It is well put together using an impressive group of background musicians and, of course, it features the voice of Peter Cetera. For all you Chicago and Cetera fans out there, here is an album you would be a fool not to buy!

Student health services

Welcome back, we hope you all had a great summer! We at the Health Service just wanted to let you know about the services we offer here at the University.

We have an office on North Campus and another on South. Both are open Monday through Friday 8-4:30 p.m. Our services are free. The only thing you may have to pay for are lab fees and X-rays.

When you are feeling ill with anything from a sore throat to a sore toe, please come to see us. We also provide Women's Health Services by appointment on both campuses.

There are two physicians who come to our office on North Campus and appointments can be made to see them.

Arrangements can be made to have allergy shots given here at our North Campus Office.

There are information resource files at both of our offices. These files contain printed material concerning major health and wellness issues.

Stop by and visit if you're sick, we do a lot more than you may think.

Academic computer center update

The computer system at the Academic Computer Center in Olsen Hall remains essentially the same hardware-wise as in past years. However, the software has been expanded and updated. The computer system consists of a cluster of two DEC VAX 8650 super-minicomputers employing the VAX VMS Operating System.

Access to the system is open to all members of the ULowell family through a widespread telecommunications network or by means of public terminals in Olsen Hall and elsewhere throughout the University.

The 1988 User's Guide for this system is available in the North Campus Bookstore and is titled: "USER'S GUIDE FOR THE VAX 8650 1988 EDITION".

All users must obtain an 'account' in order to use the system. Accounts consist of a username and a password and are automatically assigned to registered day school students in most cases. The account assignment procedure is as follows:

- all faculty, staff and returning students have the exact same account as last academic year.
- all accounts that were assigned previously but were never used are still in existence but the passwords have been changed to the individual's University ID no., which is usually the social sec. no.

- NEW STUDENTS (primarily Freshmen) will be automatically assigned an account in early September. The password for each will be the individual's University ID no (soc sec no?) and the Username will be composed as follows: First 8 characters of last name (unless name is shorter of course), concatenated with first letter of first name plus (if necessary), second letter of first name then (if necessary), decimal digits 1 thru 99, but the formulation ceases after the first two parts or as soon as a unique username is formed.

EX. BROWNJ for John Brown; BROWNJA to separate James from John Brown; BROWNJA3 if there are 3 James Browns.

Students who are unable to determine their username should consult with Mrs. Carolyn Wolf in Olsen Hall room 102B. Users with new accounts whose password right away using the SET PASSWORD command. See the User's Guide mentioned above.

For further information: see the User's Guide, call ext. 2863 or call ext. 2498.

New faculty members who wish an account on the Academic Vax system should see Ms. Fran Broderick in Olsen 109 and fill out an account request form.

What is the freshman center

The Freshman Center is a place designed just for freshmen. All of our services, including academic advising, peer tutoring, and study skills workshops, are free. In addition, the Freshman Center operates computer learning labs on both North and South campuses. They are designed to assist students in a broad range of freshman subjects -- everything from software tutorials in physics to word processing. Staff members are available to introduce you to computers, familiarize you with the software you need, and answer your questions. Many of the tutorial programs are correlated to the textbooks used in your courses.

We are located in Southwick 308 (ext. 2936) on North Campus and in the basement of the McGauvran Student Center on South Campus (ext. 2948). No appointment is ever necessary. Stop in and see what we're all about.

AL-ANON

Al-Anon is a fellowship of men and women meeting together to overcome the effects of living or having lived with an alcoholic. This program enables families and friends of alcoholics to recover from the chaotic effects of the disease of alcoholism. The success of Al-Anon comes from following the Twelve Step program developed by Alcoholics Anonymous. Al-Anon becomes the community resource for relatives and friends of alcoholics.

"Alcoholism is a family disease. The well-being of anyone living with an alcoholic is affected emotionally, physically, and spiritually. Al-Anon Family Groups offer help to anyone who is or has been affected by the problem of alcoholism in a relative or friend. Al-Anon is for people who have a problem they want to solve by sharing their experience, strength and hope with other people; the more varied the membership, the broader the opportunity to share recovery. Whatever our relationship to the alcoholic, Al-Anon is a place to share, a place to care and a place to grow."**
(Al-Anon Sharings, ACOA Al-Anon Conference Approved Literature.)

AL-ANON MEETINGS will be held EVERY TUESDAY EVENING starting at 7:30 p.m. - 9 p.m. in FOX HALL ROOM 604.

Lowell beats major ivy league schools

The University of Lowell's Work Environment Laboratory, a part of the school's Center for Productivity Enhancement, was recently chosen as one of three national finalists for a $3.5 million grant from the Semiconductor Industry Association to study reproductive and ergonomic hazards to workers in the manufacture of semiconductors. Approximately 100 institutions across the country were invited to present their qualifications for conducting the research. Of these institutions, the Association's scientific advisory board concluded that only the University of Lowell and ten other universities were qualified to submit research proposals for the grant. The other ten universities were:

•Harvard •Yale •Columbia
•Johns Hopkins •University of California (Davis) •University of Southern California •University of Washington (Seattle)

•University of Pittsburgh •University of Alabama and •University of Texas

After reviewing detailed research proposals from these institutions, the Association's scientific advisory board selected the University of Lowell, The University of Southern California, and the University of California at Davis as the grant program's three competing finalists. The winners will be selected this fall.

While You Were Out

by Margaret Smith

Editor

I would like to start the fall semester by welcoming everyone back, saying hello to all the new students, and wishing good luck to all.

You'll need it.

We have come back to school to find that it looks basically the same- South Campus, with its squirrels and maple trees, is full of picturesque New Englandness, while the Merrimack chortles under the bridge at North. Nothing much has changed, except that it has suddenly become more expensive.

Realistically speaking, a tuition increase in itself is not a bad thing. This increase, after all, is less than half the one originally recommended by Regents Chancellor Franklyn Jenifer. And, like it or not, schools must keep up with the cost of running.

Then why, after months of compromise with the Regents to modify tuition increases, did the Student Academic Fee more than double-adding up to more than twice the tuition increase?

Very interesting, especially in light of the fact that Jenifer had originally called for the stabilizing of such climbing fees..

If you are a bit confused, angry and perhaps feeling a little betrayed, you should be. The tuition and fee increases may have been decided upon by two different parties, but both are scraping into your pocket.

But the other shoe has to drop. In light of such financial tightness, one logical move might be to take on as many credits as are allowable and manageable, and graduate within eight semesters. Well, budget cutting has restricted the number of courses offered per semester, as well as eliminating many course sections, making simply gathering 12 credits together a search and destroy mission.

Back in March, Jenifer, long out of college, spoke of "seeking new revenue sources, given the rate of growth of state revenues." What new sources, Jenifer? And if state revenues are limited, what happened to the Massachusetts Miracle? In the same breath he added that tuition may be the only source of new funds and revenues in the future- not only totally contradicting his first statement, but perhaps implying that 'state schools' are soon going to be no more than second rate private ones.

Meanwhile, one good thing has come out of this mess. It has raised the awareness of some students, though obviously not enough to prevent problems like this from happening. Maybe there will be more in the future. Maybe.

Otherwise, the air is crisp, the leaves are golden and the birds are singing. It is fall in New England. So welcome back.

Trustees report

Welcome back everyone, I trust you all had a long and enjoyable summer. When I was running for office last spring many of you complained about a lack of communication and information provided about ongoing issues here at the University. In an attempt to somewhat alleviate the situation I will be writing periodic articles informing students of issues dealt with by the Trustees, the Building Authority, and the overall educational community.

The first Trustees meeting of the 1988-89 school year was held on July 13, at Cumstock Hall. By far the most important issue addressed at this meeting was the University's operating budget for 1988-89. The state legislature approved our budget 1.8 million dollars below the requested amount. Faced with the deficit the Trustees examined the options of raising funds through an increase in the Academic Service Fee or a downscaling of the university's academia.

To address the latter, a downscaling of the University would mean freeing up funds by turning away a large number of students already accepted to the school. The implications of such an action would be extremely detrimental. Not only would many students be turned away for admission, but the very image of the University would be tainted. A further consideration was the reviewing this fall of the engineering and management accreditations. With the sharp cut-back in manpower and supplies these accreditations could be in jeopardy. With all those considerations it showed downscaling to be a very risky proposition, and definitely a step backwards for the University. With that in mind, the Trustees voted the Academic Service Fee up to $154 per semester.

The 1.8 million dollars provided by the increase will go to two main areas. 1.2 million of the total will go to employing students in various departments of the university. These areas will include the libraries, laboratories, academic offices, etc. These jobs were created exclusively for student employment in an effort to ease the burden of students searching for work. The remaining $600,000 will go to maintaining supply levels here at the school.

Further happenings at the meeting included, the verification of the residence hall rates at $1694 for FY '88-89, the implementation of a University Police evaluation process, and through the graduate students a scholarship was created in the name of Trustee Paul Tsongas.

If there are any questions or problems, I may be reached at Box 2570, or at Fox Hall, Room 412, where I will be posting office hours.

The next Trustees meeting will be held on Wednesday, September 14, at 5:00 p.m. in the Resource Center, Upham Building, West Campus.

Enter college going in the right direction with one of the new computers from Zenith

It's a brand new course. Zenith announces a smooth road ahead in college with new personal computers available for fall 1988.

Just off the fast track, these sleek, small and sophisticated rollers are built with the college student in mind for today and the future professional tomorrow.

One look at the syllabus and you'll see why this new class is so popular. The semester starts off in high gear with an introduction to the new road scholars: the Zenith Super Sports & LIMITED EDITION Super Sport.

These rugged on-road, off-road portables really show their stuff even under the worst driving conditions. And without being gas guzzlers. With "intelligent power management", power is rationed to subsystems for maximum battery operation. Giving you great mileage.

Whether you choose the LIMITED EDITION model with an internal 1200 baud modem or the Super Sport with RAM option of 1.64MB with EMS, even the most advanced course is clocked in record time.

Setting the curve in its class is the new Zenith Z-286 desktop PC. This high speed racer runs at 8MHz with zero wait states, is AT compatible and can move up to MS OS/2 technology in the future. And talk about roomy. The Z-286 comes complete with 1MB RAM with expanded leg room capabilities - to 6MB - without using an expansion slot. Plus a single 3.5" 1.44MB media sensing floppy drive lets you "read and write" 720K disks.

Clarinet Society

The University of Lowell Clarinet Society offers events which are designed to enrich the campus at large in addition to the music community. Clarinet Society sponsors recitals, lectures, master classes, and repair clinics hosted by faculty, visiting faculty, professional artists, and students. Clarinet Society aims to be a source of information for students about concerts, literature, equipment, and opportunities pertaining to the world of clarinet playing. We hope to assist other student organizations on campus where possible.

Our first big event of the year is planned for September 29th, a morning master class and an evening recital. We are honored to have Janos Maczak, an acclaimed soloist throughout Europe and the USSR, lead the master class and then perform for us in the evening. In the future look for more information about this and other events.

All correspondence and any questions can be addressed to the club mail box, 6082, or through Professor David Martins, Durgin Hall.

Native American outreach organization

In America, the American Indian survived free for thousands of years before our European ancestors knew of this country's existence. America's first inhabitants were not the blood-thirsty savages that have been depicted in books and films for decades; they were gentle people who wanted only to live peacefully in their land.

When the first European explorers discovered America, American Indians were 10 million strong and a handful of warriors could use nature to provide enough food, clothing and shelter for an entire village.

Today, after suffering through 350 years of white man's diseases, weapons, "civilization" and "good intentions", these once peaceful and proud people have been reduced to approximately 1.5 million. Lack of proper education, fertile land, and opportunities have made it virtually impossible for an American Indian man to provide for his own family.

Depression, alcoholism and starvation leads to a high rate of death by violence on most reservations. Diseases such as pneumonia and T.B. could be cured if there were enough proper medical treatment to go around. The average life expectancy for an Indian man is under 50 years of age.

America is one of the richest nations in the world and it is absurd that we cannot feed our own people. The students in universities today are the leaders of tomorrow and we would all be better off if we were capable of making the most informed decisions possible when it concerns our country and the people in it.

U Lowell's Native American Outreach Organization (NAOO) may not be able to correct the mistakes made by our ancestors, but our efforts have been felt as far away as the Wounded Knee Reservation in North Dakota. Our clothing and food drives have provided the residents of Wounded Knee with some of the bare essentials necessary for survival. We also have special projects that are designed for the sole purpose of maybe making an American Indian child smile and let a mother know that someone out there cares.

The NAOO has reached out over years of oppression and through cultural barriers to learn more about the American Indian's way of life and make a difference in their tragic history. We are a team, our work is fun and rewarding, and we would like you to share in this enriching experience. Why join the Native American Outreach Organization? The reasons are centuries old.

If you want to learn more about the first Americans and how you could make a difference, please contact Prof. George Luter, Coburn Hall, Room 107, or call him at 452-5000 ext. 2435.

Important Personals Info to the right & below

Personals Policy

1. Personals must be typed. No exceptions.
  2. Personals must be on a 3x5 index card, so stock up now.
  3. Only ONE personal per card. (One is easy to count to, so don't mess up!)
  4. Your first name, last name, and box number must be on the back.
  5. All personals must be in the Connector office by 5:00pm the Monday before publication. If you get them in before Sunday morning, you'll almost be guaranteed publication.
  6. The Connector reserves the right to edit or omit any personals, when necessary.
- These are the formal rules regarding use of the personals page. Now, I would like to add some of my own suggestions.

As I said before, this is supposed to be a page full o' fun. If you find something that upsets you, please, try to take it in stride. I mean, sit back and consider the source. This is a very informal part of the paper, so try not to take it too seriously, OK? Also, if you enjoy writing personals that read like The Gettysburg Address, you had better get used to not seeing them in print. Chances are, that super-long personals will be axed. Unless, of course, they are true works of literary genius. (Such as my own!)

Well, it's time to move on. A sincere welcome back to last year's regulars. I trust that you will keep me busy. To the new freshmen (and transfers, too), I say- Get involved!!! Apathy sucks!!!! See you all next week.

The Typesetter

Escape from reality; Read the Personals!

Well, it's that time of year again. Summer has finally ended, and we must all return to our beloved institution of higher learning, The U of Lowell. Yes, I realize that this is a trying time for many, but consider this; if we didn't go to school, we'd have to actually go out and find REAL jobs. No more sending the bills home to Mom & Dad. No more interest-free loans from The Bank of Father. We would actually have to fend for ourselves!!! It's quite a shocking thought, isn't it? However, as terrible as the concept of work may be, there is something that is even worse. In the real world, there are no more Connector personals to read. (Some may find that idea refreshing, but time and electroshock will cure their delusions.) Seriously, though, the personals are one of the most widely read sections of The Connector. Their popularity is due to a variety of reasons. They are a place to wish a friend good luck. They provide a forum for, dare I say, semi-intelligent battles between worthy opponents. They are also a place to keep egos at their proper sizes. Most important of all, though, is that the personals are fun to read. Being human, we all like to have a little humor injected into our lives at one time or another, and the personals provide this necessary part of life. Sometimes the jokes are at the expense of strangers, other times they come at our own expense.

Most of the time, the personals perform the service that they are supposed to; namely entertainment. Unfortunately, ever so often, something gets printed that offends, or upsets an individual or individuals. When this type of incident occurs, we at The Connector tend to hear about it, usually at volume levels that would make the most die-hard metalhead cringe. To hopefully stave off any future problems, I am outlining both the formal and informal policy of the personals page. I realize that there will always be someone who is either not satisfied with our policy, or didn't happen to read it, but I am hoping that they will understand. Have a great year at ULowell, and, more importantly, ENJOY the personals!!

Five elected to Hall of Fame

Five former standout student-athletes including four in their first year of eligibility have been elected to the University of Lowell Athletic Hall of Fame. The announcement was made by Director of Athletics, Dr. R. Wayne Edwards, and Hall of Fame Selection Committee chairman Frank Georges following voting by the 11-member selection committee.

Named to the Athletic Hall of Fame were Mike J. Carr, the 1983 Division Two Hobey Baker Award winner and the hockey program's all-time leading scorer; Donald F. Jensen, 1982 NCAA Division Two 200-yard breaststroke champion and nine-time All-American swimmer; Robert J. Blacker, Jr., a three-time All-American swimmer; Donald J. Olson, the winningest wrestler in school history; and Stephen Oliver, a standout basketball player in the late 1970's and the only non-first year eligible candidate to be elected.

The five will be formally inducted into the Hall of Fame at the 12th Annual Hall of Fame Scholarship Dinner on October 27th at the Speare House Restaurant in Lowell as part of Homecoming Weekend activities. The five new members raises the overall Hall of Fame membership to 70.

Carr, formerly of Burlington, ONT and now residing in Lowell, Mass., was the 1983 recipient of the Hobey Baker Award for Division Two as the best college hockey player in the country at that level and the ECAC's 1982-83 Division Two East Player of the Year. The high scoring center was a Division Two All-American as a senior and was named to the All-ECAC and New England Hockey Writers all-Star Teams in each of his four seasons.

The all-time leading scorer with 279 points, Carr netted 134 goals and 145 assists in 121 games. He still holds 13 school records including most career points, career goals, career assists, and game winning goals. Twice during his four seasons he led the ECAC in scoring and finished second to teammate Ken Kaiser in a third season.

Captain of the 1982-83 team, Carr played on three ECAC championship teams and two NCAA title squads.

Jensen, originally from Endicott, N.Y. now residing in Raymond, N.H., finished in a dead heat with the University of Puget Sound's Robert Jackson in the finals of the 1982 NCAA Division Two 200-yard breaststroke event (2:05.24) to share the championship. A powerful swimmer who specialized in breaststroke, Jensen was a three-time New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association champion in the breaststroke at 200 yards. He also won the 100 yard breaststroke as a senior.

An All-American all four years in both the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke, Jensen received the NEISA's Muir Award which is given annually to the four-year swimmer who earned the most points for his school at the NEISA championships. He also received the Lester H. Cushing Award as the top male athlete at ULowell for 1982-83 and the president's Award as the four-year athlete with the highest cumulative grade point average.

Still the school record holder in the 100 (57.70) and 200-yard (2:05.24) breaststroke, Jensen also owns the 500 (4:58.42) and 1000-yard (10:12.79) freestyle marks. He owns the ten best times in 100 and 200 breaststroke.

Blacker, from Reading, Mass., was a walk-on candidate for the swim team as a freshman who turned out to be the finest sprint freestyle in school history. He earned All-American honors in the 100 yard freestyle as a junior and senior and was part of the Chiefs All-American 400-yard medley relay as senior.

The school record holder in the 50 (21.24) and 100 yard (46.45) freestyle, Blacker won the NEISA 50-yard freestyle twice and finished second once. He also captured the 100-yard freestyle crown as a senior after placing second as a junior. Blacker still owns the ten best times in the 50 and 100 freestyles and five of the top ten times at 200 yards.

Olson, the son of a career Air Force officer, transferred to ULowell after one semester at Slippery Rock (PA) University. During his four seasons at ULowell, he compiled a 75-9-2 record including a 28-2-0 overall record and a second place finish at the NCAA Division Two Eastern Regionals as a senior.

During his junior year, Olson rung up a 21-1-1 mark, but missed the NCAA Regionals and the New England Division One vs.

Two-Three All-Star meet due to a broken finger. He was 11-0 in dual meets as a freshman and 13-6-1 as a sophomore. He placed fifth at the NCAA Regionals in each of his first two seasons.

The only non-first-year eligible candidate to be elected to the Hall of Fame, Oliver (originally from Lowell, Mass. now living in Wellfleet, Mass.) joins former classmate and teammate Chris prince as a member of the Hall of Fame. A 1979 graduate, Oliver was one of the outstanding players during the transition period following the merger of Lowell State College and Lowell Technological Institute (1975) and the jump to Division Two in

Ranked 11th all-time in scoring with 1312 points, Oliver is sixth on the ULowell (1975-88) scoring parade. Among the post-merger players, he ranks 15th in games played (92); fourth in field goals made (549); fifth in field goals attempted (1099); ninth in free throws made and attempted (214 and 312); fifth in field goal percentage (.500); fifth in rebounds (561); ninth in assists (216); and tenth in steals (93).

Oliver had a single-game high of 33 points against St. Anselm his senior year and a high rebounding effort of 20 against Gordon College as a freshman. During his four seasons at UL, the Chiefs were 42-56.
